

NEWS

Cuomo Uses Eviction Moratorium to Stay in Office

BY CHRISTOPHER ROMANO ON AUGUST 13, 2021

After facing forced departure from New York’s Gubernatorial Mansion, Governor Andrew “Slippery Thumbs” Cuomo was handed an Ex Machina — this morning, a federal judge upheld the U.S. eviction moratorium.

Cuomo was pressured to resign after damning evidence of his Italian heritage came to light. President Biden immediately requested Cuomo’s resignation, citing an old Irish parable. “All these greaseballs do is grope, smoke, and gamble,” said Biden on Good Morning America. “There’s no place for that in government.” (AP Fact-checkers rated this claim ‘false’) Under the immense pressure, Cuomo gave in, announcing his resignation last week.

The end was near for Andrew Cuomo, and he was distraught that his legacy of appearing on television frequently during the Covid-19 Pandemic would be tarnished. The extension of the eviction moratorium saved him from that fate. Cuomo rescinded his resignation this afternoon, stating that he was now unable to vacate the Governor’s Mansion, and as everybody knows, living in the Governor’s Mansion makes you the Governor.

Victims of Governor Cuomo's Dago antics furiously questioned Dabney Friedrich, the judge who upheld the moratorium. Judge Friedrich stated that the decision was rooted in legal precedent, and was completely unrelated to her own 14-months of missed rent. She then dismissed the crowd, stating she was late for an appointment at a local payday-loans agency.

Senator Bernie Sanders (I-VT) praised the moratorium, a policy that aligns closely with his views, and downplayed the Cuomo situation as an unfortunate byproduct of an otherwise good piece of legislation. "Look, this policy, it's going to help millions of Americans. Call me old fashioned, but if housing security for the working class comes at the price of some sex-crazed wop staying in charge of New York, then so be it!"

Cuomo himself finally spoke up as well, saying "Ayyy, maybe I grabba ass or two once in a while, whaddya gonna do!" between bites of spaghetti. He responded to all follow up questions by waving his hands in the air and repeatedly saying "This is New Yawk!" He ended the interview after an hour and left to play cards in the smoky back-room of a local deli.

cuomoeviction

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

[Redacted]

- $55,720
We're making big moves with some new game plans and ticker pics. Matt blends his PE. Gabe invokes [...]
- $52,696 w/ Andrew Walker
We dig into Footlocker, Shopify and Bed Bath and Beyond with special guest Andrew Walker from the [...]
- $68,763 w/ Berna Barshay
The Portfolio is all over place, Matt is all in on Foot Locker plus insight from special guest [...]

